'Fiducia' is the Latin root of the word Fiduciary. Its Latin translation is the English word 'Trust... A fiduciary is a person who holds a legal or ethical relationship of trust with his clientele.

Being a Fiduciary comes with a certain level of responsibility. An investment fiduciary is any person who has the legal responsibility for managing somebody else money. For instance, an investment fiduciary's main responsibility is to manage a prudent investment process. A fiduciary demonstrates prudence by the process through which investment decisions are managed.

Therefore, Fiduciary Responsibility is a client-first philosophy. And this philosophy connects to the heart of our profession in the field of International Accounting & Finance, be it an accountant, auditor or an investment advisor. It's a central quality essential for our future job roles. It defines us, and also defines what we do. It is a voluntary choice to act in the best interests of our clientele. Therefore, it's something we all ought to ponder about.
